INFORMATION

The Bible never mentions budgeting directly, but Biblical principles can be applied to this real life challenge. The verses shown above mention stewardship, making provision and planning. These are the central concepts of budgeting. Budgeting is the process of managing money accounts related to income and expenses, using the income to provide for our families and ourselves, planning for how we should spend and save, and choosing what expenses we want to take on. In today's world, not all expenses are as optional as we would like, but we can make decisions about our lifestyle, where we live, what we do, what we have, what things we enjoy. Stewardship demands that we do exactly this.

The Bible provides direct guidance for handling our income in the form of tithing and beyond that, the Bible provides principles for managing the rest. Our budgets should always include our tithes and offerings to the Lord, should always include provisions for our families and should always include an appropriate amount of savings to show that we are planning for the future and being diligent in our stewardship.

WHAT IT MEANS TO OUR FAMILY

We are to not only create a budget, we are also expected to maintain it and follow it diligently. According to the verse from 1 Timothy, our budget should provide, not only for our families, but for our relatives as well. The Lord provides for his people and often does so by providing for the relatives of his people. We should follow the Lord's example in our own lives.
